The Democratic party is roughing it—very severely too.

A party which will blush at its own record can't elect the superb soldier in 1880.

For what is a man profited if he owns "six of the best horses in the State" and loses the race?

Prominent Republican Irishmen are stamping Maine, and are doing good campaign work.

It is said that the widow of Ole Bull will return to Eau Claire, in this State, and reside with her parents.

John Kelly still refuses to be harmonized or made happy, and therat the Democrats in New York are on the ragged edge.

Hancock and Hampton have not been successful so far with their campaign speeches. The one they have to explain and the other they are compelled to deny.

Dr. Elijah Newland, formerly Democratic State Treasurer of Indiana, and a life-long Democrat, has declared for Garfield, and the Indiana Republican State ticket.

Senator Windom, of Minnesota, says the State will give Garfield 50,000 majority. Whatever Senator Windom says in regard to his State, may be counted as a safe prediction.

However much the Democrats may think there was a misunderstanding of Wade Hampton's speech, there is one thing very certain, the people of the North do not misunderstand the Democracy.

Two of the deadliest ducks in the political puddle in Indiana, are William H. English, running for Vice President, and Franklin Landers, the Democratic candidate for Governor. These men, with the entire Democratic party, are going down with the general wreck.

In the good old Democratic days when the Democracy had the upper-hand in this government, the party managed to double the public debt every administration. Under the Republican order of things we are paying off 100 million a year of the Democratic war debt.

General Chalmers, who has been stamping Maine for the Democratic-Greenback ticket, has quit the field. He says there is no use trying to do anything that State, as "the Republicans have got us in Maine." Greenbackism in that State lost its grip since the Garfield frauds, and there is not power enough in the combined strength of the Democrats and Greenbackers to defeat the Republicans.

Mr. E. L. Dayton, of Brooklyn, New York, a representative of a large book publishing house in New York city, was in Janesville last week, and in conversation with W. T. Vankirk, said that Brooklyn was sure to give a majority for Garfield. The feeling that Garfield would carry King's county was so prevalent, that men are willing to bet two to one that he would have a majority in the county, and the Democrats did not have confidence enough in the success of their ticket to take these bets. Mr. Dayton was a Greeley man in 1872, and this year is among the thousands of Independents, who have pronounced for Garfield and Arthur.

The Milwaukee Sunday Telegraph speaks in these fitting terms of the re-nomination of Senator Richardson: "The nomination by the Rock County Republicans of the Hon. Hamilton Richardson for another term in the State Senate, will secure in the legislature the services of one of the most careful, conservative and intelligent legislators who has ever occupied a seat in that body. Senator Richardson brings to the discharge of his legislative duties, the habits and instincts of a thorough, industrious business man, with literary qualifications which enable him to express himself in debate or in his official reports his opinions in a clear, able and forcible style. He has an especially complete knowledge of the State finances and of the affairs of the State institutions, and he has enlightened and well-defined views as to their proper management which ought to be embodied in all the legislation on that subject. Senator Richardson will, of course be re-elected without serious opposition."

The School Board of the city of Watertown have done a generous thing for their neighbors by publishing in pamphlet form the experience of that place with the Free School Book System. The board first engaged in the enterprise of adopting this system in a very intelligent manner—learning the experience of eastern cities where it had long been used, obtaining the advice of prominent educators and carefully estimating the financial outlay. Free text books were distributed through the schools in April 1877—their experience has therefore continued through a period of something more than two years. The Board give the rules by which they have been guided and which were made to guide the pupils. The report shows that the entire cost to the city of Watertown to introduce new books throughout the schools was $20, and the annual investment thereafter would be about $90 or not quite thirty cents per year for each child; and that the entire loss in those three years by wear, accident and all other causes was only $22.02—or less than eight dollars per year. The plan works admirably and no one in the place ever expresses a desire for a change, and the committee earnestly recommend every city in the State to adopt it. The number of pupils in the schools of Watertown is 1,310—in Janesville 1,355—therefore happily the system in this city would cost in the outset something less than $500—and the annual appropriation thereafter would have to be about $225.

George W. Julian, of Indiana, is a member of the Democratic household and is highly regarded by people who have never heard him. But few of the present generation are probably aware that this same Julian was, in the good old days of slavery, a violent abolitionist, and an advocate of the Garrisonian doctrine that the Constitution of the United States was a "Covenant with death and a league with Hell." Not only that, but in 1852 he was a candidate for Vice President on an abolition platform containing twenty-two ferocious resolutions, demanding the overthrow of slavery, the rescinding of the Missouri Compromise, the disregard of the decision of the Supreme Court in the Dred Scott case, and the general destruction of everything that was branded Democratic. That Julian or any other man should change his political or other opinions, is perhaps—unaccountable, or it may not be obnoxious, but it is somewhat amusing to notice that he claims to occupy his old position, while the Abolitionists and Republicans have deserted him and the Democrats have all gathered under his banner. Julian probably believes that his friends of other days are now, not only disposed to deny to colored people all political rights but desire to restore them slavery—while the Democrats, especially in the South, do not cease to embrace them as men and equals and assiduously search for strawberry marks by which to distinguish them as long-lost brothers. In other words, next to James R. Doolittle, this Julian is the biggest fraud of our age and country.

DESERTING THE DEMOCRATIC RANKS. This is a year of sore trials to the Democrats. It is a year of blasted hopes. It will prove a year of galling defeats. For twenty years they have been sailing on the political sea without a purpose or without a definite course marked out. They have tried every conceivable plan to deceive the people for the purpose of recovering their lost power. They have tried anti-war resolutions and a candidate to match; they have tried an Abolition Republican; they have tried cipher dispatches; and now they are trying to win under the mask of a "superb" soldier, what they lost in the war. The people are tired of this defiance of common sense and political honesty. The intelligence of the North is outraged by such a vacillating course.

Mr. McInnis, Texas, Aug. 30.—There is great excitement over the escape of a number of prisoners at Laredo. Some were shot and others drowned in attempting to swim to the Mexican shore. Parties on the Mexican side fired on the authorities who attempted to recapture them.

DETROIT, Aug. 30.—Eight persons are known to be lost on the burned steamer Marine City.

DETROIT, Aug. 29.—The side-wheel steamer Marine City, bound down from Mackinaw, with over 100 passengers and full load in hold of freight, took fire when off Sturgeon Point at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and burned to the water's edge. The tug Vulcan, which was near by, immediately went to her assistance, and with the help of the Sturgeon Point Life-Saving Station crew, and the boats of the Marine City, succeeded in rescuing all the passengers and crew except five, as follows:

Richard Shultz, James Griffin, Frank Emmett, Guy McElroy, of Toledo; Dr. Pomeroy, of Ohio.

The Marine City was built at Marine City in 1866, has 695 tons burden, and at present was owned by the People's Line, of which Robert Holland, of Marine City, David Gallagher, and W. E. Werner, of this city, are the stockholders. Her route has been from Toledo to Mackinaw, in connection with the steamer St. Paul, making a round trip per week. Her valuation is $200,000, and was insured for $15,000.

MAINE.

The Democrat Orators Give Up the State to the Republicans.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—Democratic railroads pass through almost daily, returning to the South and West from Maine. They say there is no more need of their services in that State, and they have given up the contest as unprofitable.

Local speakers will keep up the fight, but all others are being withdrawn and hurried to Indiana. The apostles make no secret of the fact that they have no prospect of carrying Maine, and pronounce the fusion experiment a failure. They think time and money wasted there that ought to be given to Indiana before it is too late. Among those most open in declaring the battle in Maine lost is Chalmers, of Mississippi, who has been there.

The more the Irving Hall faction think about it, the madder they are, and they frankly charge the Hancock leaders with a willingness to sell them out. They know they are themselves charged with inkewawiness as to Hancock's future, and are being treated as half-devils. As for Kelly, his organ shows he is but partially satisfied by saying of the Farnham Committee, coolly:

"They do not go so far as the situation requires. They will hardly satisfy the wishes and expectations of those who are most anxious that everything should be done that possibly can be done to carry this State for Hancock. But they are better than nothing, and perhaps are as much as could be counted upon under the circumstances. Their chief importance is in the end they evidently point at. They mean union, but they must be followed by other steps of a more effective character, and the necessary steps will be taken, provided the people of the State demand it. If we are to have union and harmony it must be through the determined efforts and irresistible zeal of the Democratic masses all over the State, and in the end of the Committee, if need be."

To secure harmony in spite of the Committee will, perhaps, be found not easy. It is true there will be a State Convention, but large numbers of the Democrats are opposed to having one. The peculiar thing about it is, that neither faction is ready to have peace, while both with the name of "regular." Tammany will work hard to recover it, and seems in a fair way to do so just now.

GENERAL BUTLER.

General Butler's Long Anticipated Speech at Fanueil Hall.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 19.—General Butler's long-anticipated speech was delivered last night at Fanueil Hall, in this city. There was a great deal of curiosity and anxiety on all hands to hear what the erratic General would say, and how he would say it. The public was prepared for his return to the Democratic party by with inflammation of the kidneys and a nervous disease that caused a twitching of the face, mouth and eyes to such an extent that I could not appear in company. Day's Kidney Pill has entirely cured me, and I shall never fail to do all I can to have its merits known."

GENERAL HANCOCK.

His Meanness Towards Soldiers—A Bay State Captain Speaks

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—An ex-officer of the Thirtieth Massachusetts Volunteers states an incident which shows that General Hancock did not confine his tyrannical acts to Wisconsin regiments. This officer says: "It was in the spring of 1865, shortly after General Hancock took command of the Veteran Reserve Corps, then encamped in the vicinity of Winchester, Va., that my regiment received instructions to pack up every article of clothing in excess of a double change of underclothing, and especially boots and send them to the Quartermaster Department at Washington. All who served with Sheridan in the Valley know that army shoes won't stand Virginia clay, and to provide against unpleasant experience in marching in mud-filled shoes, our men bought Butler's boots at enormous prices before this order was received. Their feelings after the reception of the order can be more easily imagined. We were to march out on drill and inspection. At the close of the exercises we marched past corps headquarters in review, and each brigade, as it came abreast of Hancock, who stood on the plazza surrounded by his staff, gave three cheers for the commander. When General Beal, who commanded our brigade, took off his hat and gave the signal to cheer, he was thunderstruck to hear every man in the brigade yell 'boot' as loud as his lungs would let him. A young staff officer who stood behind the General asked him what it meant. 'D—them, I know what it means, I'll fix them, d—them!' replied Hancock who was perfectly livid with rage. On the following day we received instructions to carry only one change of underclothing, one blanket, we stood up in.

"What become of the boots and clothing that you packed up?" asked a bystander.

"You'll have to ask Hancock for an answer. We never laid our eyes on the property again," replied the ex-Captain.

THE BLACKWELL MURDER.

Further Developments in the Walworth County Murder Case.

DETROIT, Aug. 28.—Latest developments in the Joseph Blackwell murder case go to show that George Valey will be able to prove an alibi, as reputable witnesses are ready to swear that he was in Rockton, Ill., on the evening of the murder. Valey is a bad character, but may prove his innocence of this charge.

Yesterday Sheriff Babcock proceeded to Walworth to arrest Mrs. Blackwell, the widow of the murdered man, and her step-father, William Casperwitz, who lives near by. The Casperwitz family are Poles, and the evidence of the wife of Blackwell at the inquest together with her step-father and his frequent suggestions to Mrs. Blackwell in the Polish tongue, which no one in the room could understand, have led to inquiry. Two men who are at Blackwell's at the time of the murder, say that when the dog made disturbance which prompted Blackwell to go and see what the cause was, Mrs. Blackwell threw her arms around Blackwell and tried to keep him from going out. He pushed her away and went out and was shot dead. Again, Mrs. Blackwell has manifested an early and eager interest in her rights in Blackwell's estate which will not exceed $200. Old Casperwitz swore that he saw George Valey with a gun going toward Blackwell's that evening about 7:30, and the murder was committed at about 7 o'clock. If Valey proves an alibi it puts Casperwitz in a bad plight. A gun has been found in Casperwitz's possession. Mrs. Blackwell is said to have expressed to her neighbor, Mrs. S. Young, that "Joe" was dead and gone, and that she did not think there was any use of looking for the murderer. All these items have led to the arrest of Mrs. Blackwell and the Poles Casperwitz, and both are now in jail at Elkhorn.

FATAL AFFRAY.

At a German Gathering in Oakdale, Wisconsin.

OAKDALE, Aug. 29.—During a German gathering last Sunday, in which beer flowed freely, two men named Habel and Belknap got into a quarrel, when the latter struck the former with a fence stake about four feet long, inflicting a dangerous wound upon the head, from the effects of which he died this morning. Belknap has been arrested on a warrant issued by Justice Young, and will be held for manslaughter. Habel leaves a wife and six small children in destitute circumstances. Belknap also has a wife and four children. The trial will be an interesting one, as both parties are well-nigh all, will vote the Republican ticket. This course has been taken of their own free will and accord. The report that they were compelled to act in this way is false.

POTT'S SPECULATION.

In Learning a New Way to Break a Fard
Bank he Loses Five Hundred Dollars
(From the New York Sun.)

The following advertisement appeared in a morning journal of the 16th, under the head of "Business Changes." $20,000, he said, who can command from $1,000 to $2,000 immediately, to invest in a sure-pay-off business that will net the investor 100 per cent. The party investing can control the financial part of the business. Address, in confidence.

RELIABLE.
This attractive offer caught the attention of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Potts of 517 East Twenty-sixth Street. Mrs. Potts wrote a letter to "Reliable," and the next day a young man called. His clothes were of fashionable cut, and his appearance was pleasing. After much preliminary conversation, he barely hinted that among certain straight-laced people the nature of his business might not seem strictly legitimate. Certain bad men, he explained, ran far banks to fleece the unwary. Anything to discourage their business would be a charity. He had devised a plan which would not only do this, but would also be very profitable to the projector. In a word, he had perfected a scheme to beat the bank, which would always win. The young man casually mentioned that he had already broken two banks. In fact, his skill is so notorious that he was no longer allowed to play. He desired some respectable man to assist him.

Mr. Potts said he did not know how to play the game. The young man volunteered to teach him and made an appointment for the following Wednesday. That evening Potts went with the young man to 41 West Twenty-eighth Street, where they found a fair lay-out. They played with chips alone to show Potts how it was done. At the close of the game Potts would have won $900 had the game been in earnest. Potts went home highly elated, and explained to Mrs. Potts that it was as simple as turning one hand over the other.

When the young man called on Thursday Potts said he had only $500 in ready cash. The young man demurred a little, but finally said they might make a start on that. They went around to the same fair bank, and Potts lost his $500 within ten minutes.

Yesterday morning Mr. Potts called at the Jefferson Market Police Court with Capt. Bergfeld. He desired a warrant for the arrest of the young man, whose name he did not know. Justice Otterberg refused the warrant, saying that Potts was equally guilty. He had gambled and attempted to beat the court. Potts walked out of court and up Sixth Avenue. At Thirty-fourth Street he met the young man and had him arrested. In court the prisoner gave his name as Edward S. Scott of 657 Second Avenue, said he was a private detective in the Equitable Building, and emphatically asserted his innocence. Mrs. Potts also identified him.

Justice Otterberg committed Scott. Mr. Potts was sent to the House of Detention.

HAIR PARTING.

A Scientific Essay on the Subject

The scientific aspects of parting the hair in the middle might answer for the topic of a clever paper in the Portsmouth Review of the North American, and it is with some vague expectation that the learned anthropologists connected with those publications will take up the subject that the following cursorily collected data are submitted: At a recent meeting of college alumni, attended by 225 persons, of ages varying from 25 to 70, a curious observer was at some pains to take the statistics on this point. Of the whole number, 43 were found actually to part their hair in the middle, and, forming a judgment based upon purely optical facts, (data of apparent age), 39 out of the 43 were less than 35 years old, while the other four were between 35 and 50. In addition to this class, there was a still larger one, numbering 61, in all, who parted their locks a little to the left—half way on the average, between the median line and the line usually adopted, which, by the way, is the line prescribed by the laws of symmetry as naturally advances. Of these, the majority were men of middle age, who had evidently shifted the division gradually to the left to maintain a facial and cerebral symmetry that had ceased to be attainable in the use of the middle line. "Only a left-handed man," says a curious observer of vital phenomena, "ever parts his hair on the right side," and, in verification of this observation, which is a correct but purely empirical one, it is found that most active right-handed persons actually part on the left side. The same rule, which, in one collection of college alumni, had led nearly all the older members to shift the line insensibly toward the left as maturity advanced, is seen to be operative in general society. The competent anatomical observer will not seek long in vain for thesolution of this apparently inexplicable phenomenon. With males who are born right-handed the development of the left hemisphere of the brain, after 20 years of age, in contact with actual affairs, advances with considerable more rapidity than that of the right, and its convolutions are correspondingly more distinctively marked and more clearly defined to the eye of the anatomist. At 25 years old the difference in weight and volume, and in the definition of the convolutions, is generally not very material; as a natural consequence, the two sides of the head are symmetrical, and the hair can be parted in the middle with good artistic results. At 45, on the contrary, the volume of the left hemisphere, and of the left side of the cranium, has been increased by constant exercise until the whole ensemble is symmetrical with the hair divided along the median line, and, with the progress of this symmetry, the owner insensibly shifts the line, baring the left side of its natural weight of hair, and urging it toward the right, to compensate for the comparative lack of convexity on that side. Exclusive of occasional cases of baldness, when there is an extrinsic reason for combing the hair over, observation indicates very clearly that few men who commence with parting in the middle ever shift the line by sudden impulse. On the contrary, the result obtained at 50 is generally a gradual one, brought about by the increasing development of the left hemisphere, and the progressive necessity for restoring the symmetry of the head and face as age advances. With women, whose activities are less of the motor and muscular, and more of the sentimental type, than those of men, the median line generally continues during life to be the line of symmetry.—*N. MAJOR MORROW.

The Pursuit of Victoria's Band of Indians from Fort Bayard to Old Mexico

The Chicago Times gives the following synopsis of the report of Maj. Morrow, giving a detailed account of the operations of his command against Victoria's band of Indians, covering a period of several months, and a pursuit extending from Fort Bayard to the mountainous region of Old Mexico, which has been received at Sheridan's Headquarters. The command consisted of 81 enlisted men and 18 Indian scouts. The Major describes how his command came very near capturing a camp that contained no Indians. The camp was sighted at noon. The cavalrymen were dismounted and the horses secured. The purpose was to strike the camp simultaneously on both sides. The movement, the report states, was satisfactorily executed; but the command discovered that the camp had been abandoned by the hostiles three days before. A couple of days later another abandoned camp was taken. It was situated on a high mountain. The Major says his command was over an hour ascending to the camp, which had been defended at all must have proved impregnable. On another occasion a detachment, commanded by Lieut. Blackwood, moved out on foot at 1 o'clock at night, with the intention of attacking an Indian camp at daybreak. When dawn came the discovery dawned upon them that the hostiles had quietly departed, under cover of the darkness. In the hurry and confusion of their flight they had abandoned some 30 or 40 stolen animals. Later in the campaign the Indian scouts were dispatched to take possession of the camp of Victoria and his band. This movement was successful. The troops followed the scouts under a galling fire from the surrounding hills. The fighting continued until 10 o'clock at night, when the troops were ordered into camp. The Major states that none of his command were hurt, but that three Indians were killed, and 15 saddle-horses and a lot of loose stock were abandoned by Victoria.

The next morning, while the troops were eating breakfast, they were fired upon by the hostiles. A vidette on guard on a neighboring bluff was killed. The troops charged the hills and dislodged the Indians. Then ensued a running fight, which was kept up until 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The report doesn't state whether any body was killed or not. The next day the scouts captured a squaw and her papoose. She told them that she had taken refuge in the mountains during the fight of the day before, and had lost her way. The commander received information that Victoria was carrying a number of wounded Indians, among them being his son Washington, A. Scott come in and reported Victoria's camp four miles distant. The command was separated and the detachments surrounded the camp. The attack was to be made at daybreak. The report states that the fires were burning brightly and the "scourby pines were festooned with fresh beef." At daybreak the discovery was made that Victoria and his people were not there. They had cleared out several hours before. The next word received was that the hostiles had sacked Santa Barbara and killed a large number of people. Victoria was heard of as heading for the Mongolian Mountains. As the command was approaching the Corribitas River many of the mules fell down from thirst. In the edge of the Mongolian Mountains the Indians were discovered ambushed in a canyon, awaiting the troops. The hostiles, after a little brush, were dislodged. This fight took place by moonlight. In pursuing the enemy up a steep hill they turned and delivered a rattling volley. Three of the scouts were struck by bullets, and one was killed. The command turned in vain to advance. Lieut. Gatewood was sent around to flank the entrenched enemy, and succeeded in getting up to within ten feet of the breastworks, but soon exhausted his ammunition. HEARD FROM

EVERY MALE

Gives us a better majority as our sales every month show.

And yet all are not happy. We are. Why shouldn't we be?

Trade increasing every month; receiving goods every day and selling them too. Why? Because we sell them cheap.

When a customer comes in and looks at our goods, and after going around town and examining goods and prices in all the other clothing stores, comes back and buys of us, we think that is good evidence that we are selling a little better goods and at a little lower prices than anybody else. Give us a chance and we will prove what we say. Always glad to show goods.

DAY'S KIDNEY PAD.

A DISCOVERY BY ACCIDENT,

which supplies a wide range of eminent ability to those who have had the good fortune to find a specific to dispel the disease of the Kidneys, Bladder, Urinary Organs and Nervous System—and from the time of its discovery, has been a great success, gaining the approval and confidence of medical men and those who have used it, has become a favorite with all classes, and wherever introduced has been a success.

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS.

are the most prevalent, dangerous and fatal affections that afflict mankind, and so varied and in-diverse in their character, that persons often afflicted with them, do not know what to do with them.

The most characteristic symptoms are radical wasting away of the whole body, pain in the back, side, loins, a weak, feeble, exhausted feeling, a loss of appetite, a loss of weight, a scanty and painful discharge of various colored urine, inability to retain or expel the urine; minute shrads or casts in the urine; and, when the disease has become chronic, there is much concretion and general nervous prostration.

THE ONLY CURE.

we are particularly, and without fear of contradiction, that DAY'S KIDNEY PAD is the first and only specific for the cure of Kidney disease. It is the best known yet dis-coved for this complaint, and more effectual in its operation than any other treatment. By using this specific, you will be relieved of your distress, and your general nervous prostration.

IS STRONGLY ENDORSED.

With an authority which cannot be questioned, we can say that this specific has the most decided and rapid curative powers from many persons of high character, intelligence and responsibility. Our book

"How a Life was Saved," giving the history of the disease, and the cure of most notable cures, sent free. Write for it.

DAY'S KIDNEY PAD. CO. Toledo, O.

CAUTION. Owing to the many worthless quack remedies on the market, we advise you to never buy any other, and you will not be deceived.

HEINRICH'S is the only agent in Rock county for Day's Kidney Pad.

THE NEW YORK SUN

FOR THE CAMPAIGN.

The WEEKLY SUN will be found a useful auxiliary to all who are earnestly working for the reform of the National Government. Believing that the evils which have so long beset the community can be cured only by a change of the parts in the body, we earnestly support for President and Vice-President, JOHN B. CON-STOCK.

In order that all who sympathize with our purpose may have sufficient information with us, we will send THE WEEKLY SUN to each single subscriber, post paid, for twenty-five cents a copy for the next three months.

Address: THE SUN, New York City.

An Offensive Breath

is abominable, and there is no excuse for it—

SOZODONT will always eradicate this evil from whatever cause.

But there are thousands who utterly neglect any care of their teeth, and suffer their breath to become tainted. They puff their gossip into the faces of their listeners regardless of the annoyances they inflict.

Keep a bottle of STALDING'S GUM, and apply to such gossip's lips.
